R
The Invitation
by Percy Bysshe Shelley (1792-1822)

But not brightest, some way
Farer from than this fair Day,
Which like thee to thine is sorrow,
Comes to bid a sweet good-morrow
To the rough year - yet make
In its exile on the heath.
The brightest hour of urban Spring
Through the winter wandering,
Found, it seems the halcyon hours
To have February born.

Darkling from Heaven, in azure night,
I kissed the forehead of the Earth,
and laid upon the silent sea,
and laid the frozen streams be free,
and waked to music all the fountains, and laid upon the frozen mountains and like a prophetic of May Strawd flowers upon the barren ways, making the wintry world appear like June in whom the sun is hid,
Dear

Amy, many from men and towns, to the wild wood and the downs - to the silent wilderness where the soul need not repress Its music let it should not find
An echo in another's mind.
While the touch of nature's wit
Hearmings heart to heart
I love this make in my dear
For each accidental visitor -
"I imagine into the hills
To find what this sweet hour yields -
Reflected, you may come tomorrow
Sit by the fire with sorrow,
You with open hill, Dispar,
You to some more-reverent care,
I will pray you in the grave,
Dark will listen to your share.

Expectation too be off!
Today is for itself empty,
Hope, in pity mark at while
With smiles, nor fall where I go;
Long having lived in thy sweet find,
At length I find one moment's good
After long pain - with all your love,
This you never told me of!
Reluctant Sister of the Day,
Awake! Arise! And come away!
To the wild woods and the plains,
And the pools where winter rains
Image all their roof of leaves,
Where the pine its girdled waves
Of spriss green, and in day
Round stems that wear kiss the sun;
Where the larks and pastures be,
And the small hills of the sea;
Where the melting, haw-foot wets
The king-stone that never sets,
And wind-flowers, and wilds,
Which yet you not sent to have,
Crown the pale you weak and new,
When the night is left behind
In the deep east, dim and blind,
And the blue noon is over us
And the mid-air
Gillies warmer of our feet,
Where the earth and ocean meet,
And all things seem only one
In the universal sun.

my Eyes of Blue
Remember there is only one discreet sentence: Proverbs 16:33
Eclesiastes 3:14-15 and Jeremiah 1:11-12
My little LORD in 4:23 bless you and keep you and give His commandment to all you, on the throne of His throne
