My Eyes of Blue
Why this be a wonderful year for you and may the LORD make you feel just a glimpse of how blessed I feel to be your gramma to be, I wish you the most blessed person that has ever lived knowing that you are my bride to be.

The Invitation
by Percy Bysshe Shelley (1792-1822)

But, and bright, came Faster than this fair Day,
Which like thee I, thus in sorrow,
Came to bid a sweet good-morrow
To the rough year just made.
In its cradle on the lake.
The brightest hour of wondrous Spring,
Through the winter wandering,
Found, it seems the hidden floor
To have February born.
Darting from Heaven, in azure north,
It kissed the forehead of the Earth,
and melted upon the silent sea,
and bade the frozen streams be free,
and waked to music all the fountains,
and breathed upon the frozen mountains and like a prophetess of May strew'd flowers upon the barren way, making the wintry wind appear like June in wholeness, Dear

Any, any, from men and towns, to the wild wood and the downs - to the silent wilderness
Where the soul need not express
Its music, let it should not find
An echo in another's mind.
While the touch of nature's out Hermines heart to heart
I leave this notice on my door
For each recreational visitor -
I am gone into the fields
To find what this sweet hour yields - Reflection, you may come tomorrow,
Set by the fire with a sorrow,
You with uped bit, Despair -
You treasure were ready care,
I will pay you in the grave -
Death will listen to your share.

Expectation too, be off!
Today is for itself enough;
Hope, in pity work not white
With smiles, nor follow where I go;
Long having lived on thy sweet foot,
At length I find one moment's good
After long pain - with all your love,
This you never told me of!
Reluctant Sister of the Day
Awake! Arise! And come away.
To the wild woods and the plains,
And the pools where winter rains
Image all their roof of leaves,
Where the pine its greenland waves
Or sprays green, and in due
Road strews that near kiss the sun;
Where the larks and pastures be,
And the small hills of the sea: -
Where the melting, haw-foot wets
The rising star that never sets,
And wind-flowers, and wilds,
Which yet you outstare to have,
Crown the pale year weak and new,
When the night is left behind
In the deep east, sun and blind,
And the blue noon is over us,
And the mid-winter
Gillies warmer at our feet,
Where the earth and ocean meet,
And all things seem only one
In the universal Sun.

My Eyes of Blue
Remember there is only one discreet outcome: Prayers 14:33
Ecclesiastes 3:14-15 and Jeremiah 17:11-12
May the LORD be with you and keep you and cause HIS covenant with you to stand you may at the time of HIS CHURCH I will wait for you Rebecca as long as it takes a moment with you is more than a lifetime
